"Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; for he is faithful that promised; and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." — Hebrews X:23, 24, 25.

STATE OF SOCIETY

It is a custom of the Quakers to prepare periodically a report on our spiritual condition as a church. At the time of this printing Isaac E. Woodward was asked to prepare such a statement. It was adopted by our Monthly Meeting as our report on "State of Society". A part of it is condensed below.

Let us think together about Quakers as a whole. At times like these, when the whole world is so upset and full of prejudice and hate, we should take stock of ourselves and see if we measure up to the reputation with which other groups are so accustomed to credit us. Where are the sons and grandsons of those we were accustomed to think of and to call "The Old Quaker Saints"? Is it not true that too few are working with Friends today, are there not too many empty pews? Are we living on our past reputation, and are we to any degree feeling responsible?

How are we to be measured, as individuals and as a group, and by what standard of measurement? Are we to be judged by mere statements or our deeds? A Quaker's word used to be considered as good as his bond. Can that be said to the same degree today? Might one sometimes hear, "What you do speaks so loud I cannot hear what you say"? If the "State of Society" is as high as it should be, why does not the Society of Friends grow with many others wanting to affiliate with us? Instead, are we not barely holding our own numerically? We all agree it is difficult to stand still—are we, therefore, as a society going forward or going backward? Are we living up to what a number of my friends have jokingly said to me, “The Quakers used to be all right”? Is it not so that we have changed in manner and habits, so that we now do about everything that others do that is not considered definitely wrong? Do we still prize the old Quaker heritage, which has been passed down to us, and have we done what we could to uphold it?

If the “State of Society” is high why is it necessary to spend so much time and money on ourselves, while much of the world is hungry and in dire distress and calling in so many ways for assistance? Is this because our church membership has been made so easy that it requires little sacrifice and effort on our part? Have we become self-satisfied and somewhat selfish and indifferent to our responsibility for others?

The ascent to heaven is said to be a slow process, like ascending a stairway or climbing a ladder, round by round. If so, can we not also descend just as gradually, so that after a period of time we are on a lower level, but scarcely realize that we have lost ground? I recall the answer given me at one time when I criticized our office janitor for being so slow. The old negro's answer was, “I knows I'se slow but I'se constant.” Webster defines being constant as “to stand firm”, “be consistent”, “steadfast". Do we measure up to that kind of standard today?

Perhaps my thoughts have been expressed a little differently, but my belief is that we raise or lower the "State of Society" as a whole, largely by what we do and how we act as individuals. Years ago I heard a wonderful sermon in this church by a prominent Quaker minister. The subject was "Tracing Religion from the Quaker Viewpoint". To my mind, he did not fully answer the question as to where Christ came into the picture. After the service I went up to him and asked this direct question. His quick reply I shall never forget. He said, "Christ's place in the picture is where you put him". It was a sermon in a single sentence. Where have we, as individuals, put him? The "State of Society"—It is satisfactory?—Is it high, or is it low?—each individual must answer this question for himself.
